

Gobbets are brief extracts from literary writings, here taken from the New Testament, with the aim of helping clergy, ministers and all readers who are ready to explore its riches, to discover more than the text seems to say.

Endorsements:

“This book contains a wealth of information, based on sound exegesis and an excellent knowledge of the interpretation of scripture, and, very importantly, a most welcome focus on the way in which these Scriptural gobbets may be appropriated in a meaningful way in our current context”.
[Professor Francois Tolmie, University of the Free State.]

“The gobbets provide readers with an interpretation of various passages of Scripture from several critical angles. They highlight the subtle nuances of the biblical text succinctly, whilst simultaneously making it accessible to a lay person as well as the theologian. They will empower preachers, bible study group leaders and seekers with a wonderful tool to engage with Scripture. The author remains true to the integrity of God's word that can only aid the credibility and relevance of the sacred text for this momentous time in our history. I highly recommend these life-giving gobbets that can only aid that most exacting discipline of expository preaching.”
[Eddie Daniels, Bishop of Port Elizabeth.]

“Presenting fifty brief, stand-alone commentaries on key passages from the New Testament, Gobbets weaves together observations about individual Greek words with textual information and wider points of theological meaning. The writing is clear and lively, and the texts have been well-chosen for breadth of appeal to an audience of serious non-specialists. Preachers, teachers and students, devotional readers – all alike should find here a treasure-trove of insights”.
[Dr Simon Tibbs, College of the Transfiguration, Grahamstown.]

“You have the ability to summarize a lot of wisdom in such an accessible and lucid manner, and the idea of gobbets is truly intriguing. They are wonderful examples of reflections in Scripture, each one of them with a special spiritual and transformative impact. I had much pleasure in reading them, and, also your lucid, refreshing comments about them. I do hope that they will be published and that it will provide much support, encouragement and spiritual insight to all who will be privileged to read them.”
[Professor Pieter de Villiers, University of the Free State.]
